

Turkey Bowl

A humorous indie about an annual touch football game

Synopsis: Every summer, Jon (Jon Schmidt) gathers 10 friends together in his adopted city to play the Turkey Bowl – bringing a piece of small-town tradition to the urban sprawl – all for the beloved prize for the winning team... a turkey. Friendships flare and fade, jealousy is met with both laughter and pain, and old and unrequited love threatens to remain old and unrequited, and all of these undercurrents are revealed in the unique, improvised rhythm of backyard football.

Reviews:

"TURKEY BOWL is an admirably concise directorial debut from Kyle Smith... Unfolding in real time, this disarmingly naturalistic comedy... [is a] showcase for Smith's technical skills and his ability to capture the nuances of tight-knit camaraderie." –IndieWire
