The inspiring series that explores filmmaking through the eyes of three film students

This IFC® Original Series created by Oscar® nominee Nanette Burstein (The Kid Stays in the Picture) follows three NYU film students as they try to direct an award-winning film and launch their careers. Over the course of ten weeks, these students assemble crews, deal with difficult locations, clash with the police, face funding crunches, and encounter personal adversity. As the deadline for NYU's First Run Festival approaches, will their films be completed in time? Can their films bring them acclaim and lead to future work?

Featuring interviews with acclaimed filmmakers including Martin Scorsese, Spike Lee, and Oliver Stone, FILM SCHOOL is an irreverent, inspirational look at the filmmaking process through the eyes of three aspiring directors.

- An IFC® Channel Original Series From Academy Award® Nominee Nanette Burstein (The Kid Stays in the Picture, On the Ropes).
- Featuring appearances by Martin Scorsese, Spike Lee, and Oliver Stone.
- National review attention including The New York Times, Entertainment Weekly, the Hollywood Reporter, and more.
