One of the most intimate and engaging films on John and Bobby Kennedy ever made, CRISIS is the first and only film ever shot candidly of a President making decisions during a crisis. In June of 1963, the President and his brother faced one of the gravest racial confrontations of the 20th century. Despite a federal court order, Alabama Governor George Wallace vowed he would personally bar the door to the all-white University of Alabama to prevent two black students from enrolling at the school.

With a revolutionary new filmmaking style, award-winning filmmaker Robert Drew and his four-team crew recorded the crisis as it unfolded, capturing the story from all sides up until its dramatic climax. With unprecedented access inside the oval office and rare footage of John and Bobby making critical, last minute decisions, CRISIS is an astonishing and suspenseful film classic. The DVD and VHS also include Drew's award-winning film Faces of November, a view of reactions to President Kennedy's death on November 22, 1963.

- Released in time for the 40th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination: November 22, 1963.
- From award-winning filmmaker Robert Drew, and filmed by luminaries in the documentary film profession including DA Pennebaker and Richard Leacock.
- Includes the film Faces of November, a view of reactions to President Kennedy's death on November 22, 1963.
