GARRISON

SYNOPSIS This freeform, intimate look at America's foremost humorist and commentator goes behind the scenes of the popular radio show A Prairie Home Companion and inside the imagination of the man who created it. Over one year of filming has resulted in an unusual portrait that cannot be defined by the standard terms of chronological biography: the subject himself is an enigma, and the fictional world he has created has become a real place in America—Lake Wobegon. Keillor single-handedly revived the art of live radio for generations of fans by creating an on-stage world that deeply resonates with his audiences. In the best tradition of Will Rogers and Mark Twain, Keillor mixes storytelling and humor to give us a lighthearted but deeply felt reflection of ourselves.
